Abstract:

The Motion Picture Collection is primarily a photograph collection. Actor and actress stills are represented, including portraits by studio photographers, film and set stills, and other images, as well as related programs, brochures and clippings. Early technology and experimental work in moving pictures is represented by images about camera and projection devices and their inventors. Items related to movie production include early laboratories, sound, lighting and make-up technology. These items form Photograph Collection P-26 in the Seaver Center for Western History Research.

Scope and Content:

The Motion Picture Collection is primarily a photograph collection. Actor and actress stills are represented (including portraits by studio photographers), film stills, set stills, and other images, as well as related programs, brochures and clippings. Early technology and experimental work in moving pictures is represented by images about camera and projection devices and individuals including Eadweard Muybridge, C. Frances Jenkins, Thomas Armat and Thomas A. Edison. Items related to movie production include early laboratories, sound, lighting and make-up technology. Much of the collection, as well as other film collections in the Seaver Center, were acquired as a result of the efforts of Earl Theisen (1903-1973). He served as Honorary Curator of Theatrical Arts at the museum for a few years following 1931. Theisen was a technician at the Dunning Process Plant, a member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, and a member of the Society's Historical Committee.

The collection is arranged in four series. Series 1 through 3 comprise of individual donors, therefore most of the subseries are delineated by donor accession. In some instances a subseries is arranged topically rather than by donor, as in the case of the Tom Mix Collection. Series 4 are primarily items without accession numbering.

- Series 1: Pre-cinema, Early Cinema, Technology of Moving Pictures and Movie Production
- Series 2: Silent Film Era
- Series 3: Sound Film, or "Talkies" Era
