P-078-6-401	Photograph	Lee, Robert E. The rarest of photographs of General Robert E. Lee, this picture was taken just a few days before the Battle of Chancellorsville, in what Douglas Southall Freeman described as "the high noon of the Confederacy." The photograph was made in the camp of the Army of Northern Virginia, probably during the week of April 22, 1863, by the firm of Minnis & Cowell of Richmond. The last photograph ever made of General T.J. Jackson was taken close to the same time.	n.d.

P-078-21-18	Photograph	Sister Mary, St. Agnes Hospital, Baltimore. She came with Sister Scholastica in 1854 to Los Angeles. One of 6 ?? - 3 Spanish & 3 Irish who came to found school & hospital in Los Angeles. Following information supplied by Kristine Gunnell: This is a photo of Sister Mary Ann McAleer (1814-1889), the administrator of St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore from 1862-1879, and 1883-1889. She was likely a mentor of Sister Ann Gillen (1818-1902) who managed the Los Angeles Infirmary (Sisters' Hospital) from 1858-1881. Gillen was one of the original six sisters who came to Los Angeles on January 6, 1856, and she was likely Irish-American (born in Pennsylvania). Gillen worked as a nurse at St. Mary's Orphan Asylum in Baltimore before coming to Los Angeles (1852-1855) and since McAleer had been a nurse at the Baltimore Infirmary since 1839, Gillen likely consulted with her informally on difficult cases. Although undated, the inscription notes that the photo is "Sister Mary Ann, St. Agnes Hospital, Baltimore," so it was likely taken after 1862, since St. Agnes opened that year. So, the picture was also likely sent to Sister Ann Gillen during the 1860s or 1870s. [The sender's name is illegible on the copy, but it was likely another sister who knew them both in Baltimore]. As to how the photo got into the del Valle collection, [Actually, the image is from P-78, not verified that it was ever in Del Valle family possession] Gillen likely gave the photo to the del Valles as a memento to remember her by before she left Los Angeles to return to the sisters' motherhouse in Emmitsburg, Maryland in 1881. The del Valles had been long-time benefactors of the Daughters of Charity since their arrival in 1856 and Ygnacio del Valle had been a patient in the hospital as recently as February 1880. Sources: 'Ann Gillen, D.C.," n.d., Entry in Daughters of Charity, Consolidated Database (10-0), Archives St. Josephs Provincial House, Emmitsburg, Maryland; Mary Ann McAleer, D.C.," n.d., Entry in Daughters of Charity, Consolidated Database (10-0), Archives St. Josephs Provincial House, Emmitsburg, Maryland; Hannefin, D.C., and Vincentian Studies Institute (U.S.), Daughters of the Church: A Popular History of the Daughters of Charity in the United States, 1809-1987, 74; Ygnacio del Valle to Reginaldo F. del Valle, February 9, 1880, Reginaldo F. del Valle Collection, Box 1, HM 43944, Huntington Library, San Marino, California.	n.d.
