Chain Fern: I'm sensitive to the sun, so I live in cool and shady spots. Look for me underneath the bridge.

Sycamore: My large leaves cover the ground in the winter, making safe homes for little critters like bugs. Look for my leaves on the path.

Toyon: Birds love to eat my red berries, which only grow in the winter. Look for me by the Dry Creek Bed.

Spiderweb: I can come in all different shapes and sizes depending on which spider made me. Look for me in nooks and crannies and on plants.

White Sage: My leaves and stems are used for food, medicine, and ceremonies by some of the Native American peoples in California. Look for me in a sunny spot between the Pond and the Museum.

Fox Squirrel: Even though I live near humans, natural foods like acorns and berries are my favorite. Look for me climbing trees.

Maidenhair Fern: I like to get my feet wet by splashing around near the water. Look for me in the Pond.

White Alder: Instead of growing fruit, I make catkins! Can you find any growing on my branches? Look for me standing along the path.

Bee Hotel: I'm a safe space for native bees to raise their young. Look for me by the Pollinator Meadow.
